

Medi-Cal and Healthy Families Comparison

Purpose

This chapter compares the no-cost Medi-Cal and Healthy Families Programs. It provides a basic overview of the programs, their similarities and their differences. For more information please see Chapter 6: Medi-Cal and Chapter 7: Healthy Families.

NOTE: Although there are many different Medi-Cal programs, this chapter only covers no-cost Medi-Cal, specifically focusing on the percentage programs for children and pregnant women.

Medi-Cal and Healthy Families Comparison

Both Medi-Cal and Healthy Families are California state programs (Medi-Cal is California's version of Medicaid) that provide healthcare coverage to many low-income children. Medi-Cal can also provide healthcare coverage for pregnant women and other adults depending on their incomes and individual situations.

Families can apply for both no-cost Medi-Cal (for children and pregnant women) and Healthy Families with the joint Healthy Families and Medi-Cal for Families mail-in application.

For children, both Medi-Cal and Healthy Families cover the following medically necessary services:

- Preventive medical services
- Immunizations
- Inpatient and outpatient services
- Hospitalization
- Laboratory and X-ray services
- Well-child exams
- Prescription drugs
- Maternity services
- Dental benefits
- Vision benefits
- Mental health services

The following chart provides a comparison of the Medi-Cal and Healthy Families Programs regarding basic eligibility requirements, benefits and costs.

NOTE: There are many other people in addition to children under age 21 and pregnant women who may qualify for Medi-Cal. If they are counted as family members when using the joint Healthy Families and Medi-Cal for Families mail-in application, applicants can request Medi-Cal for these family members in Section 3 of the application. They will be contacted by their county Department of Social Services for any additional information needed to determine their eligibility. Also, applicants can apply for Medi-Cal in-person at their county Department of Social Services.
